The Home Treatment of Paralysis Mar 27 2020 Excerpt from The Home Treatment of Paralysis In the following pages, which are written for the general rather than the professional reader, no attempt will be made to give a scientific classification of the various forms which Paralysis may assume, nor to discuss the multitudinous causes that operate in its production. Our task is the more practical one of showing a means of cure, leaving the discussion of interesting, but unprofitable theories to those who prefer wisdom to knowledge. Wisdom may be acquired from books, but knowledge is the offspring of experience. An extensive familiarity with paralytics during a period of six years in a public institution, where the most elaborate means were employed, both for purposes of diagnosis and treatment, has shown us that while two cases are seldom found precisely alike in origin and course, and while different - often-times widely different - medicinal means are necessarily employed in the successful treatment of cases, yet all cases of true Paralysis are sufficiently similar in their requirements to be grouped together and spoken of in general. Let it be distinctly understood that we do not mean by this that all cases are to be classed together and treated alike. On the contrary, the treatment of various cases must always be varied according to their various conditions and requirements. But, as we shall see further along, there comes a time in nearly all cases, when the causes which produced the Paralysis have disappeared, and instead of disease to combat, we have only results to meet, a time when the conditions are the same and the requirements the same. At least, this is especially so of the auxiliary means which we seek here to explain and enforce. The importance of these auxiliary measures cannot be over-estimated. The Paralysis of Perception Jul 12 2021 The first fourteen passages from The Paralysis of Perception were automatic writings. They were written when most of us are asleep. This was accomplished by the author out of conflict within a personal relationship. His subconscious was trying to warn him that there was a problem; however, this had not been understood at the time of the writing. Seven years passed, and just as foretold, everything that has meaning in his life is questioned. The tower starts to fall and his journey begins. This had been experienced in the last five passages written in December 2005the breaking-down of what was old and what was to become the new. After experiencing what he thought could be, he knew what he once had was the only way it should bebut with a difference: total awareness of oneself must exist before his true reality could be brought into existence.

A Question Of Interest Jun 30 2020 In Saudi Arabia today a classic confrontation between Islamic fundamentalism and modernism has brought the Saudi banking system virtually to a state of paralysis. The debate is between those upholding the traditional Islamic prohibition against charging interest on loans and those who wish to see a modern banking system capable of generating credit to support economic development. Drawing on personal experience, interviews, and unpublished primary sources, Peter Wilson tells a dramatic story of powerful personalities, clashing cultures, and often mysterious institutions with a journalists' eye for the telling anecdote as well as for the statistical evidence.

Polio and Its Aftermath Feb 28 2023 In this book, Shell, himself a victim of polio, offers an inspired analysis of the disease. Part memoir, part cultural criticism and history, part meditation on the meaning of disease, Shell's work combines the understanding of a medical researcher with the sensitivity of a literary critic.
